To Whom it May Concern:

January 5, 2005

I am an ANMA board certified naturopath and have been practicing natural healing methods for approximately the past five years. I started to use the Neuromodulation Technique (NMT) as taught by Dr. Leslie Feinberg shortly after I attended my first seminar in May of 2003.

I use NMT precisely as taught by use of the NMT seminar manuals written by Dr. Feinberg. I use this technique with all of my clients along with any other modalities which may be called for. I have found that the NMT system works as disclosed and is very useful in treating patients.

Some of the types of longstanding conditions that I have found the NMT technique to be of profound benefit for include rotator cuff pain, urinary incontinence, complications of Lupus diagnosis, gall bladder and kidney disease, allergies, malignancy, infections, arthritis, and chronic pain.

I will give an example of the results I have observed in a case in which I used NMT. A female of middle age was experiencing severe pain in the stomach area. She had received a diagnosis from an allopathic doctor of having an ulcer and possibly a hiatal hernia with surgery recommended. She was very wary of pursuing the surgery as a sibling had experienced the same problem, surgery was performed and the outcome was not a good one. After one session of the Neuromodulation Technique the pain subsided almost instantly. After two followup sessions the case was closed. This was over six months ago and there has been no recurrence of the condition for this woman.

Sincerely,
